

KASAI, Yoshinori and Eiichi Tajima eds, Doing Public History: Weaving Alternative and Polyphonic Histories, Keio University Press, Tokyo, 2025.

笠井賢紀・田島英一編(2025)『パブリック・ヒストリーの実践:オルタナティブで多声的な歴史を紡ぐ』(慶應義塾大学出版会) in Japanese

Part I: Key Issues in Public History

- Chapter 1: Sedimented Alternative Histories and Memories (Yoshinori Kasai)
- Chapter 2: Two Notions of “Public” in History (Eiichi Tajima)

Part II: Histories Embedded in Practice

- Chapter 3: Resonating “Parent–Child (Oyako) Radio”: Another History Woven Through Radio Broadcasts in US–Occupied Okinawa (Akinobu Matsumoto)
- Chapter 4: Russian “Chastushka” and the Practice of Weaving Histories (Yoko Kumanoya)
- Chapter 5: Disaster Heritage Sites of the Great East Japan Earthquake and Public History: Voices Woven Through Google Maps Reviews (Taichi Uchio)

Part III: Beyond the Challenges of Narration

- Chapter 6: Under What Conditions Can People Narrate Their Experiences of Disaster?: Reflecting Together Through Filmmaking (Kana Ohashi)
- Chapter 7: From “Not Narrating” to “Beginning to Narrate”: Focusing on the Postwar Experiences of Hiroko Tsuchiya, a Manchurian Repatriate (Makie Yukawa)

Part IV: Who Weaves Histories?

- Chapter 8: Possibilities and Limitations of Public History for/by Hikikomori (Hiroki Fujitani)
- Chapter 9: Between Religious Experience and the Practice of Weaving Histories: A Case Study of a Sufi Brotherhood in Senegal (Kae Amo)
- Chapter 10: From Public History to Genocide: Conflicts in the Practice of Weaving Histories Related to Palestine/Israel (Hani Abdelhadi)

Part V: Creating the Practice of Weaving Histories

- Chapter 11: Utilizing Memory History Research on Housing for Sustainable Community Building (Kazuhiro Takeyama)
- Chapter 12: Embraced by the Shikoku Pilgrimage: Death of Self and the Practice of Weaving Histories as Revival (Kazuki Goto)

Afterword (Yoshinori Kasai)

* NOTE: The translation is by Kasai and has not yet been reviewed by the authors and the publisher.